Dear Matthias,

Tobias Diez has blocked you on GitHub, but because you have administrator privileges, you are still able to comment on his issues and PRs. We ask that you respect his block and refrain from doing this. If some administrative action needs to be taken on any of his issues or PRs, please ask someone else to handle it.

Dear Matthias,

On August 9th, we asked you to respect Tobias' block by not replying to his issues and PR. On August 23rd you continued to comment on Tobias' PRs and on August 24th, you followed by changing labels. To the best of our knowledge, you have both blocked each other and he is prohibited from commenting on your PRs, but your status as an owner allows you to comment on his.

Considering that you have taken no measures to resolve the underlying conflict, ignored the warning issued by the Code of Conduct Committee, and that we have suspended you in the past for abusing your github privileges arising from your status as an Owner of the Sagemath organization (June 21st), we are removing you as an owner of the SageMath Github organization, until October 11, effective today. Any subsequent offense will be met with a more severe measure.

I agree. His reply is also crazy: our message is not an "absurd take" — it's a statement of facts followed by a request.

OK, this one's easy: next time he had his warning. Next time we get notified of him infracting the ban, his admin privileges on github go on hold again. I don't think a further response or warning from us is required at this point.
